volunteering

grow seedlings in your backyard

- a practical and rewarding experience for anyone
- materials and comprehensive instructions provided
- green thumb not required ... just spare time, a sunny spot and a commitment to doing a good job because seedlings require daily attention from November to May be a volunteer bushcarer

- join our team of over 600 bushcarers
- learn techniques for protecting bushland in our free one day workshops
- volunteer at a time that suits you
- equipment and ongoing support provided collect seed

- learn to collect native seed and identify native species at our free one day workshops plant trees

- spend a day in the country planting tubestock
- bring the family and work together
- watch your tubestock grow to maturity over the years

It is not essential to be a financial member to volunteer for Trees For Life - anyone can participate!

reduce carbon offset your emissions

- reduce your energy use
- offset your carbon emissions through Trees For Life, www.carbonneutral.com.au
- contribute to biodiverse carbon pools when joining Trees For Life you are supporting environmental projects and volunteers across South Australia
